Options for Responding to Interpersonal Violence

Everyone’s experience to interpersonal violence is unique. If you have been the victim of interpersonal violence, here are the options available to you as a Princeton University student. Please keep in mind the information below as you review the options.

<th>Non-Confidential Resources</th>

<tr>
<td>Confidential resources are not obligated to report information that is given to them. This allows the client to explore his or her options in a non-pressure environment in order to make informed decisions. The only exceptions to this rule are in cases that involve imminent risk of serious harm, emergent hospitalization or a court order. While specific information is kept confidential, non-identifying information is collected for statistical purposes as per the Clery Act.</td>
<td>Non-Confidential Resources are required by law to report these incidents/violations and take legal, disciplinary or other action accordingly.</td>

SHARE

Located in McCosh Health Center, SHARE is a confidential resource that is available to you at any point in this process. SHARE advocates may assist with accessing any of the resources on or off campus.

SHARE peers are non-confidential and can help you get connected to the SHARE office.

Additional Resources on Campus

Non-confidential resources on campus that can provide information and support are:
- Carl A. Fields Center
- Davis International Center

Title IX

The University does not tolerate sex discrimination or sexual misconduct, including sexual harassment, sexual assault, stalking and intimate partner violence. Information about the University’s Title IX Coordinator, sexual misconduct investigations and disciplinary procedures, and the provision of interim measures (e.g., academic or housing accommodations), can be accessed at RRR 1.9 or on-line at sexualmisconduct.princeton.edu

UNDER 21?

If you were under the influence of alcohol or other drugs at the time of the incident, even if you are under the age of 21, you will NOT be charged with a criminal offense relating to using or serving alcohol or using drugs by DPS or Princeton Municipal Police. The use of alcohol or other drugs will not normally result in University disciplinary charges against a victim of interpersonal violence or a complainant in a Title IX case.

If you prefer not to talk to anyone at the University, but still wish to speak to someone about your options, you can call Womanspace, Inc.

Womanspace provides a 24-hour confidential hotline, advocates and professionals to facilitate the Sexual Assault Response Team (SART) activation, access to legal resources and individual and group counseling. Womanspace can be reached at 609-394-9000.

Forensic evidence can be collected by a Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner (SANE) at a local hospital within 5 days of the incident. A SHARE and/or Womanspace advocate can accompany you. There is no cost for the forensic examination and no bill should be generated. Evidence can only be analyzed if you decide to file a police report to pursue criminal charges against the offender within 5 years of the incident.

I want to take legal action.

Department of Public Safety (DPS)

At the direction of the Title IX Coordinator, an investigative panel comprised of University administrators and/or external investigators conducts interviews and gathers evidence. The panel, by a majority decision, determines whether the Sex Discrimination and Sexual Misconduct Policy (RRR 1.9) has been violated. A SHARE advocate can provide support and an adviser of the student’s choice can accompany the student during the process. Where a student is found responsible for violations of the Sex Discrimination and Sexual Misconduct Policy, sanctions will be imposed.
